Less Than Clearing Sale Prices
Are the prices this week at the Great Broadway Bazaar; i. e. other folks clearing sale prices, not Crawford's. Oh, no, it takes a Crawford clearing sale to out-do all the other sales ever instituted, because Crawford won't be best by competition and can't be any how while he has the goods to reduce on and the pluck to risk a loss.

THE OHIO SENATORSHIP.

Unusual Interest in the Contest—The Election Men Confident.

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 9.—Unusual interest is manifested in the Senatorial contest to-day and the lines are being closely drawn, apparently without any change in the situation. The hotel lobbies are filled and the candidates are moving about among the masses. There is a report that the Thomas men will try and combine on C. W. Baker of Cincinnati, but this, apparently, is a mere rumor. The many agents, as they say they have enough votes to nominate on the second ballot against all combinations. The radio and office men who have no special candidate still cling to the idea that there will be a split of the caucus, but a diligent search has so far failed to discover the member or members who would lead a bolt.

Lucas Avenue Property.

A few weeks ago property situated on the north side of Lucas avenue between Ninth and Tenth streets, opposite the ruins of the St. Louis University, was sold at commissioner's sale for the estate of John Goddin. The improved portion consisted of six lots, with a three-story brick manufacturing building, containing a boiler, was sold for $44,000 to David A. Brossard, and the vacant ground went at $285 a lot to Adam Beck.

Mr. George W. Bailey, attorney for the Goddin estate, was satisfied with the sale of the improved section of the property, but he was of the opinion that Mr. Beck's bid of $23,775 was insufficient, and that for that reason part of the sale was void. The correctness of his judgment as to really values has been affirmed, for to-day Mr. Bailey permitted a private sale of the vacant ground to Mr. John O'Brien, the boiler maker, at $505 a lot. This is a saving of $1,500 to the estate without loss of commissions in the transaction.

Politics in Iowa.

DES MOINES, Ia., Jan. 9.—The roll of members of the Legislature in the city up to noon reaches fifty. The canvass for the minor offices is warm, but is confined entirely to the Republicans. The prohibition convention met at 10 o'clock this morning, and did nothing more than to temporarily adjourn.

A WHITE HOUSE HINT.

THE ST. LOUIS POSTMASTERSHIP APPOINTMENT TO BE MADE SOON.

President Harrison to Take Action Tomorrow or Saturday—Col. Schuartz's Chances—The St. Louis World's Fair Delegation Call at the White House—Indian Commissioner Morgan to Be Confirmed—Washington News.

By Telegram to the Post-Dispatch.
WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 9.—It is understood that the President contemplates sending to the Senate several important nominations within a day or two. Among them will be the Collectors of Customs and Internal Revenue at Chicago and postmasters at St. Louis and Baltimore.
The fears that Col. Schuartz cannot be confirmed are still blocking the St. Louis Post-office matter. Such fears are entertained, it is reported, by the President's closest advisers in the premises. There will be no nominations to-day. Should there be a consolidation against Col. Schuartz he may be defeated yet. John W. Gates has said he would never be nominated.
Congressman Wade has had another long talk with the Attorney-General, and expects that Col. Tracy's nomination will go to-morrow.
Frank P. Blair, attorney for the Osage tribe of Indians, is here.
Judge Garrett of Clinton, who is mentioned as a candidate for Supreme Judge of Missouri, is here with Harvey W. Salmou. The latter is interested in banking institutions here, and is looking after his interests in the Indian Territory.
Mrs. Senator Cockrell and Mrs. Tarnsey will receive their friends to-day at the residence of the former.
The appointment of Postmaster at Louisiana, has been stopped at the instance of Capt. Dougherty, who is himself a candidate for the place.

Called at the White House.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 9.—The St. Louis World's Fair delegation have received from the hard work of yesterday, and this morning, by prior engagement, called upon President Harrison at the Executive Mansion. The delegates assembled at headquarters and marched in a body with their blue ribbons streaming. Ex-Gov. Stanford acted as spokesman, and after announcing the object of the visit to the President, introduced the delegates one by one. When Gov. Francis was reached he took occasion to remark that St. Louis expected to be named in the bill which was to pass Congress for a World's Fair, and they wanted to ask the President to approve the bill when it reached him. The President responded that he had heard of the matter and that his good words so often given were too often assumed as meaning approval. Whether this was meant to apply to some of the seekers for office who were in the party or not is questioned. There was no speech-making and when the hand-shaking was over all retired. The special committee appointed at last night's meeting to present a resolution to Speaker Reed asking that the World's Fair question be submitted to a special committee of thirteen, went to the Capitol to see Mr. Reed this morning. Gov. Francis has the body in charge. New York and Washington joined with St. Louis in the request, which was placed before the speaker. That the request will be considered favorably is doubtful. It is said this morning that the bill will come from the Foreign Relations Committee leaving blank the place for the insertion of the name of the city. The delegation is bringing all the pressure it can to have things otherwise, but the chances are decidedly against it. All of the addresses made yesterday have received favorable comment.

Dorechester to be Superintendent of Indian Schools, to be reported favorably to the Senate.

The Reading Company's Financials—M. K. T. Bondholders' Demands.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Jan. 9.—The Ledger, in its financial article, says:
"The present Reading situation may be tersely stated. The company have not earned sufficient money for a dividend on the first preference issue. There have been expended $1,000,000 on the old collieries, which are chargeable to expenses. This sum, with possibly some other items, certain interests in the junior bonds issue, shall be charged as betterments to capital account, so that enough net earnings may appear on the statement to provide a dividend on the first preference issue. It is a done there may be a dividend declared, but the company will probably have to borrow the money to pay it, as the sum at issue has already been spent. So far as has been developed last night, the determination of the management remains unchanged, that as the expenses of the Reading Co. have absorbed about all the net earnings beyond the fixed charges there could be no dividends declared on the income bonds. The Reading managers will meet to-day to consider the question, but they may not finally decide it, being not required to do so before January 15. HIS SHADOW FOR LIFE.

THE TERRIBLE THREAT HANNAH SOUTHWORTH MADE TO STEPHEN L. PETTUS.

She Would Haunt Him as Ellen Godwin Did John Throckmorton Years Ago—Story of the Kentucky Romance to Which Mrs. Southworth Called Her Victim's Notice Before She Shot Him to Death.

IN the account of the death of Mrs. Hannah Martin Southworth, the murderess of Stephen L. Pettus, in her cell in the Tombs, the story was only partially told. She had followed and persecuted the man for years. She claimed that he wronged her, and her whole idea of life seemed to be to make him suffer. She had followed him for years at the Pierpont House in Brooklyn, and she would read for him at any hour she pleased. He was so much afraid of her that he always came. When he did she gloated over him, abused him, threatened him and demanded from him the attention which she would never cease this persecution as long as he and she lived. Her brother declared that on more than one occasion Pettus had implored her on his knees to let him alone, and that she refused. He offered her money, but she refused. Finally, Pettus, as a last resort, to break this spell, told all to his wife. Then the woman became more bold, assaulted him on the street and finally killed him.

Her brother, describing one of these enforced interviews between Pettus and Mrs. Southworth, said:

"One day she told him: 'What Mary Gilpin was to John Throckmorton, so will I be to you, if it takes me twenty-seven years to enjoy my revenge.' You know that terrible story of Kentucky life. She kept her word, poor girl."

That this was a terrible threat the history of the Kentucky tragedy with which it was connected will show. The following account of it is clipped from the files of the New York World of December 11, 1888:

THE SAD STORY OF ELLEN GODWIN.

The death of young Maurice B. Throckmorton, killed at Birmingham, Ala., on January 1, while endeavoring to break through the jail, recalls a story as strange as anything in fiction—a story as full of dramatic scenes and incidents as anything that was ever produced upon the stage, and which has been four times brought up by tragedy to the memory of those who dwelt most to heart.

It was nearly forty years ago that John Throckmorton, son of Aris Throckmorton and uncle of the young man killed at Birmingham, was one of the most brilliant and successful of the old South. He was rich, witty, handsome. He was the finest type of the Southern gentleman, impulsive, generous, and full of life.

He was connected by blood and marriage with every prominent Southern family from New Orleans to Louisville. When he came back from college to live among his people the fairest prospect was spread out before him. He went in to enjoy life, and as he had ample means and was a welcome guest wherever he went.

One stormy night in January, when the snow was beating against the window panes and the people were hurrying in to blazing fires, he was called to the door.

He saw a woman standing motionless beside a gas-lamp directly opposite. She was dressed in black, and although he could not see the face he recognized the outlines of her figure.

He started back, and she came forward and watched her for hours. That was the first night that "Throckmorton's Ghost" was seen.

It was the beginning of what was to last without interruption for twenty years. The dark shadow of the woman came into his window that night to follow him all over the world; it was to be with him in the blaze of noon and in the darkest night.

He was to see it in every capital in Europe; it was to be close behind him in his most secret moments; it was to be with him in the shadow so that in a delirium of terror he would wonder if his mind were not deceiving him, and if he were not on a phantom.

It was in vain that he tried to put oceans between him and the specter, for money was tried; from that stormy January night John Throckmorton was never for one moment alone.

It was wonderful how she appeared to know of his movements. She was always close at hand, and it was to a party she would be standing on the opposite side of the street when he got out of his carriage and went to his hotel for days, and if then, in the dead of night, he slipped out by a side entrance, she would be close behind him.

He was to see her in the most secret places, on the streets, in the most secret places, where people merely glanced at her carelessly as she slipped by. She was to be with him in the most secret places, where people merely glanced at her carelessly as she slipped by.

He was to see her in the most secret places, where people merely glanced at her carelessly as she slipped by. She was to be with him in the most secret places, where people merely glanced at her carelessly as she slipped by.

THE GREAT GUESSING MATCH WHICH BT. LOUISANS WANT TO SEE ENDED.

Rumors That Contradict Each Other—Information Regarding the Situation Colored by the Friends of Candidates—Prince Russell Harrison's Mission—Secretary Noble's Task.

CHURCHES' commission has been made out and signed. Filley's commission has been made out and signed.

President has decided to appoint Pearce. T. C. Fletcher says George Bain will be Postmaster.

Rumors until you can't rest wondering what fragment of truth there may be in any one of them. Every candidate in the field has been appointed half a dozen times since the fight for the St. Louis Post-Office began, and yet William Hyde holds the office, and continues to draw $200 per month through his commission.

It has been said on the authority of one Congressman that the President is positively decided on one point: that Chancery J. Filley cannot be Postmaster.

An equally reputable Congressman is authority for the story that the President has committed himself to no candidate, but leans to Filley.

A friend of the President, no less a person than R. C. Kerns, said in Washington the other day that President Harrison had virtually put the matter in the hands of Secretary John R. Noble, and that gentleman's decision would govern him.

Secretary Noble endorsed George W. Fishback early in the fight, and that candidate is still in the field. Mr. Noble is very friendly to the Globe-Democrat, and would be influenced in such a matter by that paper's utterances.

As yet the paper has editorially endorsed no one. An attempt has been made to swing it by that candidate's friend, R. C. Kerns. He has not fully succeeded.

Mr. Kerns is not a familiar acquaintance of the Globe-Democrat building. Indeed, it is stated on the authority of President D. M. Houser that Mr. Kerns never entered the building until about two weeks ago, when he accompanied Russell Harrison, the President's son, who had been specially commissioned by his father to aid in the settlement of the fight.

Mr. Kerns' looks with favor upon Mr. Kerns' candidate, and it is presumed the President would like to see him appointed. He has not only been denounced in that paper's editorial columns for years, but his candidacy for the Postoffice has been especially denounced recently.

It is probable that the editor of the paper nor the President of the corporation would accept of Kerns with any satisfaction, and so Secretary Noble, if he is influenced by the paper, will begin by ruling the two leading candidates out of the race.

He will then have Frank L. Ridgley, G. W. Fishback, Charles E. Pearce and George Bain to choose from. Some of the well-informed politicians in the city are of the opinion that the name of the next Postmaster will be Charles E. Pearce.

When Secretary Noble was in the city to discuss with Mr. Pearce for a long time, and it is stated that Mr. Pearce at that conference said that he would not be a candidate for the office if it was tendered him.

He is now in Washington, and it is believed by many persons that he will accept of the office if it is tendered to him. To-day is Post-office day at Washington, and several practices have been announced.

FT. SMITH, Ark., Jan. 7.—The most important factors in the growth and development of an inland city are its situation with reference to an agricultural country which is or can be made tributary, and its position with reference to the great channels of commerce.

The former affords the opportunity of traffic in the products of such a section and of becoming the market for its supplies; the latter assures the establishment of lines of transportation to facilitate such distribution and encourage manufacturing.

Fort Smith occupies a fortunate position in the section of the first of these advantages. It is situated about midway of the Western boundary line of Arkansas it has at its doors, to the west, a stretch of country nearly 400 miles square, which is admittedly one of the most fertile agricultural sections of the Union.

A section now thinly populated with Indian, but which is rapidly becoming a great center of population.
